ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Current supplied to a group of components is selectively sensed so that the current supplied when a particular component is the only active component can be compared to a reference current indicative of proper component operation. If there is a discrepancy, an alert can be generated. Can be applied on a larger scale to allow isolation of a subsystem, then a group within the subsystem, then a component with the group, etc.